

Dolly Nye

Pat Turner scholar

Department of Health, Disability and Ageing

Master of Entrepreneurship and Innovation

The Australian National University

Key learning areas

- Innovation and entrepreneurship frameworks for public-sector impact.
- Project management and co-design methods to apply in social-policy settings.
- Integrated Indigenous knowledge systems into innovation, project management and leadership practice.

Benefits and future impact

- Translating research insights into practical, culturally safe aged-care strategies.
- Applying entrepreneurship and project management skills to drive innovation and service improvement within the APS.
- Supporting stronger community-led and co-designed policy approaches.
- Bridging academic research, Indigenous knowledge and community priorities, and APS reform priorities.

Personal highlights

- Developed strategic and innovative thinking to support community-led approaches to public policy and projects.
- Developed a co-design framework centring Elders' voices and community priorities.
- Gained confidence and commitment to driving positive change.

In five years

- Leading culturally safe aged-care implementation across regional communities.
- Advancing policy innovation within the APS to strengthen Closing the Gap outcomes.
- Progressing research findings to inform models in other regional communities.

Australian
National University

CHARLES
DARWIN
UNIVERSITY
AUSTRALIA

Australian Government